All the consuls are pressing for indemnity for the destroyed missions. A special deputy has been appointed in each district to estimate the damage done, the Chinese apparently realizing that the settlement of the claims is the only method of ridding China of foreign gunboats. Mr. Chilson's Meeting.

Communicated.

The meetings conducted by Rev. Arthur Chilson are growing in interest. The song service last evening was followed by a precious season of prayer and testimony. The sermon was based upon Mal. 3: 2. The Holy Spirit was sensibly present. Two souls received the baptism with the Holy Ghost. Many desired the prayers of God's people. May the good work go on.

Let all who can, come out to the services. The methods of Mr. Chilson are above reproach—there being no repulsiveness.

Meeting Saturday at 3 p. m. and 7:30 p. m.; on Sunday at 11 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

A penny was extracted from the throat of Master Ralph Ogburn, the three-year-old son of Mr. Charles D. Ogburn, of Winston, says a special to the Charlotte Observer, in Philadelphia, last evening. The operation was successful, the penny being located by the use of X-rays. The child swallowed the penny 11 months ago and it has been in his throat since that time. It was believed when the father left here that the physician would have to cut the boy's throat, but fortunately this was not necessary.

RECONCENTRADO MEASURES.

Lord Kitchener Will Adopt Lord Robert's Plans to Pacify the Boers.

By Wire to The Telegram.

Durban, Nov. 16.—The Natal Mercury reports that among the measures to be adopted to pacify the Boers is the reconcentrado plan of Lord Roberts. Lord Kitchener has decided to take this step, owing to the difficulty of dealing with armed Boers while hampered by a civilian population in the outlying small rural towns.

A BURNING IN COLORADO.

John Porter, the Negro Who Murdered a Little Girl, Meets His Doom on the Very Spot Where His Victim Died.

Limon, Col., Nov. 16.—Chained to a railroad rail close to the ground on the exact spot where his crime was committed, Preston Porter, Jr., or, as he was familiarly known, John Porter, this evening paid a terrible penalty for his deed. It was 6:23 o'clock when the father of the murdered girl touched the match to the fuel which had been piled around the negro, and twenty minutes later a last convulsive shudder told that his life was extinct. What agony the doomed boy suffered while the flames shrouded up his flesh, could only be told by the contortions of his face and the cries he gave from time to time. The executioners, who numbered about 300 citizens of Lincoln county, had not the least semblance of the ordinary mob. Their every act was deliberate and during all the preparations, as well as through the sufferings of the negro, hardly an unneccessary word was spoken. Grinly they stood in a circle about the fire until the body was entirely consumed and then quietly they took their way back to Limon, whence they departed for their homes shortly afterwards.

Daughters of the Confederacy to Meet Next Year in Wilmington.

Montgomery, Ala., Nov. 16.—At the closing session of the meeting of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, officers were elected as follows: Mrs. E. J. Weed, of Florida, president; Mrs. W. W. Reed, of New York, first vice president; Mrs. S. T. McCulloch, of Virginia, second vice president; Mrs. John P. Hickman, of Tennessee, recording secretary; Miss Mary F. Meares, of North Carolina, corresponding secretary; Mrs. J. Jefferson Thomas, of Georgia, treasurer, all re-elected.

The next annual meeting will be held at Wilmington, N. C.

The Rev. William A. Murray, one of our Greensboro boys, who has a host of friends in our city, will fill the pulpit of the First Presbyterian church tomorrow morning and night.

A Photographic Checking Clock.

An apparatus that has at least the merit of novelty is on exhibition in London. It is designed as a checking clock to record the hour of the arrival of employees at their places of work. The novelty consists in a sensitized photographic ribbon attached to clock-work. Each employee, as he or she arrives, presses the button of the machine and immediately his or her photograph, together with a photograph of the clock showing the moment of arrival, is impressed on the movable ribbon. It is said that the photographs can be made at the rate of 40 a minute.—Youth's Companion.

The Up-to-Date Maiden.

He—Will you elope with me if I will bring an automobile around at 11 o'clock to-night?

She—Yes, but it must be an electric automobile—not one of those horrid-smelling gasoline affairs.—Somerville Journal.

Great interest has been aroused in medical circles in Germany, says a Berlin dispatch to the London Chronicle, by the discovery by Dr. Otto Emmerich, of Baden-Baden, of a specific against morphia poisoning and that peculiar form of disorder known in Germany as "morphinismus." The increasing use of morphia among a considerable section of society has been lately exciting much attention, and medical men have been unable to prescribe any efficient remedy. It is claimed for Dr. Emmerich's discovery that it has proved infallible in the numerous cases in which it has been applied. It is distilled vegetable oil of intense acidity, two or three drops of which are taken internally daily. After a cure, extending from three to six weeks, patients acquire an intense loathing for the use of the morphia needle.

BISHOP WILL ARRIVE MONDAY

WILL BE THE GUEST OF HOTEL GUILFORD DURING CONFERENCE.

One of the Leading Methodists of the Country—In May 1890 He Was Elected Missionary Secretary and Did Fine Work—Was Elected Bishop at Baltimore in 1898.

Bishop Henry Clay Morrison, D. D., of Louisville, Ky., who will preside over the Conference to open here next Wednesday, is now in Charlotte. Tomorrow morning in that city he will preach in Trinity church and in Tryon Street church in the evening.

The Bishop will perhaps arrive in this city Monday. While here he will be the guest of Hotel Guilford. He will preside over both the North Carolina Conferences, and by him will all the appointments to the ministerial charges be made.

Bishop Morrison is a native of Tennessee, but most of his ministerial life, which extended over a period of about thirty-four years, was spent in the Louisville Conference. For four years he was a member of the North Georgia Conference, and was, during that period, pastor of the First Methodist Church in Atlanta. By the General Conference, which was held in May 1890, he was elected one of the missionary secretaries of the church. This position he filled with marked ability and success. During the last two years of his secretaryship he was largely instrumental in raising sufficient money to pay off a debt of over one hundred thousand dollars which had been contracted by the Board in enlarging and better supplying the foreign work.

In May 1898, at the session of the General Conference held in Baltimore, he was elected a bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He has since been abundant in Episcopal labors, and has filled with marked ability this exalted and responsible position. He is a man of fine personal appearance, of engaging manners, of a kindly but firm spirit, and in the cabinet, on the platform and in the pulpit brings to bear that wisdom that comes from deep thought, large experience and wide research.

Oak Ridge Getting in Trim—Defeated Chapel Hill School Team Yesterday. Correspondence of The Telegram.

Oak Ridge, Nov. 16.—Our ball team plays the Chapel Hill High School today and Madison tomorrow. The boys are in fairly good condition except two sprained joints. We fear one of our best players will be out of the two games, but he will be in condition for our games next week when we play Horner at Durham the 22nd and A. & M. in Raleigh on the 23rd. These are the last games before Thanksgiving. After these the team will prepare for the Guilford College game which will be the most exciting contest of the season.

The O. R. I. football team defeated Chapel Hill school team here this afternoon by the tremendous score of 76 to 0. The visitors never held the ball on downs, nor took it from the wearers of the blue and red. The O. R. I. boys had not a single fumble during the game, and Kirkpatrick kicked eleven goals out of a total of thirteen. The interference and blocking of the home team was nearly perfect. We play Madison High School here tomorrow.

Reception at Grace Church Last Night.

The reception given last night in the Sunday school room of Grace M. P. church by the Ladies' Aid Society was a most enjoyable affair. The recitations by Misses May Bain and Daisy Donnell were very good, while Mrs. Ernest Teague and Mr. Ed. Wills sang a duet that was much appreciated by those present, as was a flute solo by Mr. Wills.

A number of the Normal students who attend Grace church were present and added much to the occasion.

Light refreshments consisting of various kinds of fruits were served.

WAYS OF WOMEN ARTISTS.

How Brave Girls from the West and South Learn to Paint in New York.

There is much information about the ways of women artists from the west and south who study in New York, in "The Bacillus of Beauty," the new novel by Harriet Stark.

The reader is introduced almost at the outset to Kitty Ried, a red-headed girl from Cincinnati, who is just doing up a flat parcel of drawings of animals to take down town, and who bases a demand for extra strong tea upon that fact.

"I'm starting for the Star office," she says, "to find the photo-engravers routing the noses and toes off all my best beastesses."

Kitty is the "animal artist" of a Sunday newspaper—which might be a portrait from the life, since more than one New York paper has employed such a specialist at a high salary. She irritates the readers by breaking into a promising tete-a-tete between the heroine and her lover from the west by dashing back within five minutes to sketch a "Hippopotamus Comic" that she thought of on the street.

CHINESE LANGUAGE LOGICAL.

It Becomes Exceedingly Simple When You Understand the Common Characters.

Every word in the Chinese language has a logical reason for its existence and peculiar formation, and each word consists of either one individual character or a number of them combined in order to make a complete word. Take the word field, a square divided into sections or lots, writes Frederic Poole, in Ladies' Home Journal. When the word man is written by the word field the combination makes the word farmer, indicating the avocation of a man who is associated with fields and agriculture. Still more suggestive is the Chinese word for truth, sincerity, faithfulness, honesty. It is formed by the combination of a man and word, thus expressing that one form of honesty consists in a man standing by his word. The word for box is indicated by a square having four sides of equal length, while a prisoner is literally a man in a box, a fact which is often grossly illustrated in China when a criminal is sentenced to death, and is carried to the place of execution in a square box.

STORIES OF BELLE BOYD.

CHAPTERS FROM THE LIFE OF THE CONFEDERATE SPY.

An Eye Witness Tells of a Meeting of the Heroine With an Old Confederate Soldier After the War—Her Daring Midnight Ride From Port Royal After Having Learned the Federal Plans—Her After Life and Death.

Written for The Telegram.

Belle Boyd's name is to the South what that of Charlotte Cushman's is to the North. Both were brave women and served the cause which they espoused with intrepid courage. But it is of the former that the present article has to deal.

This writer knew and admired Belle Boyd for a number of years; and reading an account of her death in an old newspaper (which occurred a few months ago) it called up to memory the following incident:

This writer met her at one of those sleepy Southern towns so common in southern Louisiana, where she had gone to rest for a month after a hard winter's work on the lecture platform.

She was then a striking looking woman, somewhere in the fifties. She had a strong personality and graceful, winning ways that won her many friends, and no doubt were the secret of many of her successes in outwitting the "Yankees" during the dark days of the war.

One day we were strolling along the village road enjoying the fragrant, spicy air from the pines, and admiring the cozy homes on either side, when she stopped to admire an especially pretty place; at the first glance, the house, standing a short distance from the road, and the grounds in front seemed nothing more than a veritable bed of roses; there were roses of all kinds and descriptions, and being a great lover of flowers, she proposed that we stop and ask for a bouquet.

I acquiesced, and opening the gate, we walked up the path, but before we reached the steps of the veranda, an old man appeared from around the side of the house and greeted us with true Southern hospitality. We made known our request, and he smilingly turned to a bush of beautiful roses and began snipping them off with a pair of pocket scissors. He was very talkative, and finding we were strangers in the town, gave us information regarding all the interesting points of the neighborhood, and at last told us he had fought in the Confederate army during the war.

This writer then told him that if he were an old soldier, he would not doubt be pleased to know that my companion was the Confederate spy, Belle Boyd. When I mentioned that name he dropped his flowers and scissors, sprang forward and grasped both her hands in his and looked searchingly in her face. His was radiant with delight.

"Miss Belle! Miss Belle!" he cried; "yes it is, yes it is! It makes me young again just to look at you. You must come to the house and see wife; I reckon I have talked about you to her more or less all my life."

Then he told her what regiment he had served in, while assisting her up the steps of the veranda, at the same time shouting, "wife, wife! where are you?"

"Wife" had appeared by the time we were seated on the veranda, and when told the name of my companion she came up and kissed her; then pushing her gently down in her chair again, called to the servant to bring her some strawberries.

This writer was a minor factor for the rest of the visit, but was perfectly contented to remain so; sitting for the greater part of the time, with mouth wide open from sheer amazement, listening to the stories the old veteran told, and some of the thrilling adventures my companion related, that had befallen her.

Back they went over those dark days of the war and lived once more in those thrilling times. Ashby's name was frequently mentioned, Miss Boyd having taken many a desperate chance to give him information of the enemy's movements. Her eyes sparkled with the excitement of her former exploits, as she talked; but at last with a merry laugh, she turned and said:

"Well, we have fought all our battles over, and now it is time to go."

We left with our arms full of flowers, the old couple accompanying us to the gate, after having received my companion's promise that she would come again.

This is only one incident of many to show how she was remembered by the men in the Confederate army.

A point in view of her bold daring will be shown in the following narra-is where we stand in the lumber business. At the kicking spot, as it were, in regard to prices.

First comes the owner of the timber. He just woke up to the value of it and wants double last year's prices. Then the sawmill man. He has not been making a fortune and thinks now he should share a little in the general prosperity.

They say to us: "We must have so much for our trees and work." After a while it is "up to you." Don't kick. You don't suppose we have nerve enough to put up prices unless they had first been put up on us. No, indeed. But prices are NOT high. They have been too low and are just now getting reasonable. Your children will be glad to build at double the price it now costs you. It is a trite, but true saying, if you want to build, "Now is the time."

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1900.

SOUTHERN REPRESENTATION NOT IN DANGER.

We have never been much concerned about the threatened reduction of the South's representation in Congress. It appears to us that it is not worth while to the Republican party, outside of such satisfaction as might come to it as a matter of pure vindictiveness. Whatever may be said of that party, it does not play bad politics. And from any standpoint that can be considered, this would assuredly be an unprofitable business. It could bring the party nothing whatever in the North, while it might be a serious injury in the South, where the Republican party will be, in a few years, very assiduously seeking the election of Congressmen. If this be true it will gain nothing by a present reduction of the number from this section. True that reduction would now fall upon the Democrats almost entirely, but that would be of no service now when the Republican majority is more than is necessary.

The above paragraph was written last night. This morning its position is confirmed by an Associated Press dispatch from Washington and a special to The Charlotte Observer. The Associated Press dispatch reads:

On account of the President's attitude of great opposition to reducing the South's representation in Congress, there is a growing opinion that legislation looking to the reduction will not be pressed by party leaders in Congress. In this connection it is suggested that any action taken with reference to the suffrage of the South in advance of the adoption of a definite policy in the Philippines might throw some embarrassment in the way of the proper disposition of the citizenship rights of the Filipinos, and moreover, it is felt that the government has as much as it can deal with now, without getting into a contention over domestic affairs.

There is some reason to believe that Mr. McKinley has kindly feelings towards the South, but there is nothing in his career that would warrant the belief that he would stand against party leaders to any great extent in this or any other cause. He may seek to convince them that the scheme is unwise, and thus get them to drop it, if indeed, the real leaders seriously entertain the idea, but this is the extent that we may depend upon him. This comes back to our original proposition that the South's safety lies in the inherent bad politics of the measure.

Secretary Root and General Wood are off on a hunting and fishing trip in Cuba and are using two government boats. This reminds one that there was once a great hue and cry in this country because a certain President of the United States used a government light house tender while going on unofficial duck hunts. Times change.

It is hoped that the Daughters of the Confederacy will be able to succeed in the undertaking at their Montgomery meeting this week of inaugurating plans for making the Confederate White House a museum of history and erecting a monument to Jefferson Davis.

We regret that our excellent Saturday contribution by Shawen and the W. C. T. U. column were forced out today. They will appear the first of next week.

And now poor Mr. Croker's feelings have been lacerated by the statement that he has received bad money.

TO THE PUBLIC

The City Treasurer, on account of the unavoidable delay in the collection of the taxes which were due on the 1st day of October, 1900, finds himself at present short of funds, but by reason of the public spirit and accommodation of the Southern Stock Mutual Insurance Company and the Underwriters of Greensboro, I am able to announce that the said companies will cash at their face value all interest bearing warrants issued since September 1st, 1900, by the city to school teachers, policemen and other city employees, when they are in the hands of the original holders and do not exceed $100 each, provided that this order does not hold good after $1,000 has been expended in cashing the said warrants. Applications should be made at the bank counter of the Southern Loan and Trust Company.

If you are suffering from that all too common complaint, Dyspepsia, with its attendant ills, Constipation, Headaches, Impure Blood, etc., use Abbey's Salt daily and it will bring you health. WINE OF CARDUI

HEALTHY OLD AGE.

LARUE, BENTON CO. ARK., Aug. 4.
I am 49 years old and have been suffering with Change of Life. I had floating spells so bad that none thought I could live. My husband got me Wine of Cardui and it saved my life. I am like another person since taking it.
MRS. E. B. TOWNSEND.

Wine of Cardui

It is the devout wish of nearly all people to live to a ripe old age. None of us want to die young. This universal desire can be realized if care be taken of the health in early and middle life. A little precaution then will add many years to our existence. Death can be kept away a long time. Happy, healthy old age will be the lot of the woman who promptly corrects the ailments which afflict her sex. In youth, Wine of Cardui will take the female child safely over the dividing line between girlhood and womanhood. As a wife she needs it to help her through the trials of pregnancy and childbirth with as little discomfort as possible. At the Change of Life it will help her over the dangerous place that appears in her pathway between 40 and 50. Then will come many years of truly blissful existence. She will grow old slowly and gracefully. To the last she will preserve that charm and beauty which are always characteristic of perfectly healthy grandmothers. It is for women alone to decide whether they will be healthy or sick. The remedy for their sickness is close at hand.

As Full as He Could Be.

A story is told of a citizen of Glasgow which shows that contentment is a virtue really existent in some cases. One of the inhabitants was making his way homeward on a certain evening, and taking a good deal more than his share of the pavement, when he encountered a Glasgow town councilman walking along in a respectable fashion. The councilman, noticing his unbalanced condition, stopped, and shouted with wrathful dignity: "What d'ye want?" To this his fellow townsman blithely replied: "I want—nothing! I'm as full as I can haud!"—Chicago Chronicle.

Automobiles on English Farms.

The automobile is to be turned to practical account by the farmers of Kent, England. Every year a large part of the fruit crop rots from lack of transportation, the railways not being able to meet the emergency, and the plan is for the farmers next year to take things in their own hands, starting motor cars round the orchards during the evening and night and bringing the day's pickings to London by the early morning.—N. Y. Sun.

RIBBED THE GRAVE.

A startling incident, of which Mrs. John Oliver, of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides; no appetite—gradually growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately, a friend advised trying Electric Bitters; and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim." No one should fail to try them. Only 50 cents per bottle at C. E. Holton's drug store. served as she left her own apartment and made her way to that spacious front room.

She applied her ear to the hole and found to her satisfaction that she could hear distinctly every word that was uttered in the room below. And though she could not see them, she was sufficiently familiar with their voices to distinguish the utterances of each individual, and thus the conference was much more intelligible to her, than it would have been to a stranger.

Hour after hour she lay there prostrate upon the floor of the closet; for the conference was a long one and many points of importance were discussed. She dared not move a limb, she hardly dared to breathe, lest her presence be detected; and she well knew what would be the result if she were. For herself she cared less than for the inevitable loss of the assistance which she hoped to render that very night to the Confederacy. Midnight came and found them still debating; another hour past and at last they arose and separated until morning.

As they passed out into the hall, she stole to the head of the back stairs. The coast was clear. They had not thought it necessary to post a guard anywhere near to the council chamber.

Silently she crept to the back door of the hall, keeping well in the shadows, and gliding swiftly along she was soon out of the building and had reached the cottage and her own room in safety. And here by the light of a carefully shaded candle, she wrote down in the cypher with which she had been furnished, every word of the discussion which her memory supplied.

But the most difficult part of her work remained to be done. Ashby must be informed of the intentions of his enemy. She dared not trust a soul, so alone she made her way to the stable where her own saddle horse stood, fleet footed and spirited. Hastily saddling him, she led him slowly out of the stable yard, muffling his foot-falls by guiding him along the grassy edges of the carriage way. Once out of grounds of her aunt's home she had less need of caution; speed was more essential. For the sound of hoofs along the high-way need not excite suspicion. Away she galloped, shaping her course rather by the stars than by roads, straight towards the point at which Ashby had had his headquarters where she last communicated with him.

But suddenly it seemed as if she had met with a difficulty she could not surmount. Straight in her way stood a sentinel in the well known blue uniform.

"Halt! Who goes there?" He demanded.

"A friend with a pass from General Shields," she answered boldly.

The night was a clear starlight one with no moon. She had in her possession a pass which she had that very day procured from the Federal commander for a Confederate soldier returning South after being exchanged.

This she determined to make use of, trusting that the sentry would not deem a close examination necessary, after he saw the document was drawn up in due form. The man took the paper and glanced at it; his eyes, accustomed to the darkness could discern that it was on a printed form, and he saw that the familiar signature was appended. He therefore handed it back, and lowered the weapon with which he had at first barred her way.

Onward she galloped only to be again brought to a standstill by the outer chain; for there were two lines of guards about the town.

But he proved no more suspicious than his comrade and she passed him with as little delay. And now she taxed her horse's speed to the utmost. Across fields, through groves, along the highway. Faster, still faster, until she was fifteen miles from the starting point.

She drew rein before a large dwelling, of plain but substantial aspect. This was her destination; for here, as she had good reasons to feel sure, the daring and dashing Ashby had for some time had his headquarters; and he would find sure means of transmitting any information of importance to his chief, the famous "Stonewall" Jackson. Briefly she told him of that night's council of war; of the plans discussed, those regarded with favor, and of the route and destination decided upon.

"And here," she concluded, "is the whole thing written out in the cypher agreed upon." He thanked her warmly and tried to make her rest. But her night's work was not yet done. She must be back at Port Royal before daylight, for if she were not, if she ever were captured by the Federals again, they would be sure to hang her for a spy. And as she was well aware any suspicions of this night's work would not only result in her own apprehension, but in such a change of the enemy's plans, as to make the information she had brought practically useless.

So back she started on her long lonely ride. She eluded the first line of sentries, and hoped to get safely by the second, as the pass she carried would hardly account for her speedy return.

The night was rapidly drawing to a close and she knew if unhindered, she could reach the shelter of her own chamber before the drums sounded the reveille. She hoped to dash unquestioned by the sentry, whom by his posture she judged was sleeping at his post. But alas for her calculations he awoke as she approached and challenged her. She knowing her only chance lay in flight urged her horse onward.

"Halt!" he cried, but she dashed on, and an abrupt turn in the road was an effectual shield to her. She was too well acquainted with the rules of war to fear he would ever betray her; he could not do so without confessing he had slept at his post—a capital offense for a soldier.

At last she reached her aunt's home. Unsaddling her horse and providing for his comfort, she entered the cottage and gained her own chamber just as the day was beginning to dawn.

And thanks to her courage, the Confederates received the information that put them in readiness to meet the Federals the next day with all due preparation.

This adventure is only one of many which this brave woman undertook to aid the Confederate army.

After the war was ended for a number of years she traveled through the States giving lectures on her past life; and while touring through the State of Wisconsin she died very suddenly of heart disease, while in the act of stepping upon the platform to deliver a lecture. With her death one more link of the old Confederate army was destroyed but her memory will live forever green in the heart of every Confederate soldier.

The most miserable things in the world are those suffering from dyspepsia and liver complaint. More than seventy-five per cent. of the people in the United States are afflicted with these two diseases and their effects: such as sour stomach, sick headache, habitual constiveness, palpitation of the heart, heart-burn, waterbrash, gnawing and burning pains at the pit of the stomach, yellow skin, coated tongue and disagreeable taste in the mouth, coming up of food after eating, low spirits, etc. Go to your druggist and get a bottle of August Flower for 75 cents. Two doses will relieve you. Try it. Get Green's Prize Almanac. Grissom & Fordham.

A GOOD THING.

German Syrup is the special prescription of Dr. A. Boschee, a celebrated German physician, and is acknowledged to be one of the most fortunate discoveries in medicine. It quickly cures coughs, colds and all lung troubles of the severest nature, removing, as it does, the cause of the affection and leaving the parts in a strong and healthy condition. It is not an experimental medicine, but has stood the test of years, giving satisfaction in every case, which its rapidly increasing sale every season confirms. Two million bottles sold annually. Boschee's German Syrup was introduced in the United States in 1868, and is now sold in every town and village in the civilized world. Three doses will relieve any ordinary cough. Price 75 cts.
